

WHAT MEG WHITMAN COULD HAVE DONE WITH HER $100.3 MILLION SPENT ON ELECTION THUS FAR

If Whitman, whose main qualification for office appears to be her unlimited wealth, wants to help the state she could:

Pay monthly unemployment benefits for 82,237 unemployed Californians

Pay the unemployment benefits for two months for the 40,000 workers she would lay off

Pay yearly health insurance premiums for 7,477 families

Fund 18,018 students at the Pell Grant maximum

Pay 11,447 pupils in California K-12

Pay the "fees" for 10,770 students to attend one of the University of California campuses for year 2009-2010

Help as many as 5,714 households avoid foreclosure

Four out of the Top ten cities for housing foreclosures are in the Central Valley:

Modesto – ranked second in the nation

Stockton – ranked fifth in the nation

Merced – ranked sixth in the nation

Bakersfield – ranked ninth in the nation

Hire as many as 1,755 new grad RNs in California for a year

The above stats were calculated by the California Nurses Association with the help of the Institute for Health and Socio-Economic Policy
